Carmichael Heads News Association

Warren R. Carmichael, director of news and public affairs for WEEL radio, has been elected president of the newly-organized Northern Virginia News Association. At Hottel, coordinator of school-community relations for the Fairfax County Public Schools, has been named vice-president of the organization.

Other members of the executive board include: Florenz Hins, director of public relations for the Alexandria Hospital, treasurer, Doreen S. Jones, public relations officer for the City of Falls Church, secretary, and John T. Cox, director of public relations for the Fairfax Hospital, Richard Holcomb, community relations director of the Arlington County Public Schools, Carol Griffee, staff reporter for The Evening Star, and William Elvin of the McLean Providence Journal, executive board members.

The Northern Virginia News Association is composed of men and women who are members of the working press devoting least half their time to gathering news relating to Northern Virginia, and of representatives of Northern Virginia governments and non-profit organizations who have primary public information responsibilities.

The purpose of the Association is primarily to serve as a meeting ground for members of the press in Northern Virginia and public relations officials. It is also the intent of the NVNA to honor outstanding student journalistic achievements in the area and to recognize outstanding individual effort in the production of these publications.
